“Are you interested in befriending a teen and sharing everyday skills or academic knowledge? Teens in our Teen Center, STRIVE, and Power Scholars programs could greatly benefit from support in strengthening their interpersonal skills and academic strategies. The program serves a diverse group of teens, with 80% coming from "at risk" families”. MCPHS University students play a vital role in this after-school program by mentoring and serving as positive role models for teens who may lack consistent positive influences. You may provide a range of services, including homework assistance and participation in after-school activities such as sports, arts and crafts, and mentorship. “By dedicating an hour or two each week, you can make a significant impact on these young students' lives”.
